

What's behind the big red dots?

Yes, they're just political signs. But I believe that behind that thin sheet of plastic should be some core values, real integrity and a commitment to making all our lives better.

I believe that our elected representatives have a responsibility to make sure every Minnesotan has real opportunities and a chance for a bright future. I believe health care is a right. I believe discrimination is wrong, and that we should make no law to legalize discrimination against anyone. And I believe that investments in our children's future—like education and conservation—are not optional expenses, but some of the most important work government does.

So next time you see one of my big red dots, know that there's a committed, fair, and compassionate candidate standing solidly behind it.
