

Maybe
in the future,
political positions
won't be reducible
to a bullet
point •

Or a sound bite. Or an survey question. Issues are complex, and we need policymakers who understand their complexity. Solving environmental problems requires understanding taxation; improving healthcare demands knowledge of market forces. Most issues have more than two sides.

I'm Jessica Peterson, and I know this. I'm always giving these issues thought and attention. For now, though, I'll keep it simple: I'm a true progressive who believes in practical, intelligent, non-political solutions to our biggest problems. I believe human needs are human rights. I believe government has a place—an important place—and that's why good government is essential. If you want to know where I stand on the specifics, let's talk about it.*

Don't you think it's time we all start communicating again?

A senator for all of us.
